

How a lead becomes a customer

Every route from the first campaign email to a garage that's live and paying – what the system does on its own, what you have to do, and what HighLevel sees at each step.

Assist

Self-serve · card · 14-day trial

Connect

Self-serve · card · 30-day trial

Automate

Demo led · Direct Debit

There are three ways in

Two are self-serve and pay by card. One is sold on a demo call and pays by Direct Debit. The route decides who chases them, how they pay, and whether they sign anything.

Assist

£200 + VAT / month · £240 charged

AI receptionist answering calls. The garage finds themselves on /get-started, signs online, adds a card, and gets 14 days free. 400 minutes included, then 25p a minute.

Finds their garage → Signs online → Adds card → 14-day trial → Charged, live

Connect

£250 + VAT / month · £300 charged

Website chat. The garage signs up on /mot with a code texted to their mobile, and is inside the portal within a minute – no card, nothing signed. 30 days free, then a paywall asks for a card. 500 conversations included, then 20p each.

Enters details → Texted a code → Straight in, 30 days free → Paywall → Adds card, live

Automate

Priced per deal · Direct Debit

The full integration with Garage Hive or Tyresoft – books jobs straight into their diary. Always starts with a demo call. We set the price, send an agreement, build the agent, then invite them in. Optional one-off setup fee.

Demo call → You onboard + send agreement → They sign + pay setup fee → You build the agent → You invite → Direct Debit, live

The rule that decides everything: self-serve always pays by card (Stripe). Anything we sell on a demo call pays by Direct Debit unless you deliberately change it. A customer is on one rail or the other – never card for one thing and Direct Debit for another.

Who actually does the work

ROUTE	RUNS ITSELF	NEEDS A PERSON
Assist	Account, trial, billing, going live	Nothing. Signed but no card = no account, so chase them as a lead.
Connect	Account, trial, paywall, going live	Nothing.
Automate	Agreement, setup-fee invoice, stage moves, billing, HighLevel	Onboard them, set the price, get the credentials, build the agent, then two buttons.

How a lead becomes a customer

What happens before they fill anything in

This part is the same for Assist and Connect. Nothing reaches HighLevel until we have an email address – everything before that is us listening, not recording.

YOU

The campaign goes out

Cold outreach from HighLevel – email or SMS to a list. This is the one part of the journey that lives entirely in HighLevel, and the only place we do outbound.

HIGHLEVEL

Contacts imported and sequenced.
Nothing is created by us yet.

CUSTOMER

They land on the site and search for their garage

On /get-started (Assist) or /mot (Connect) they start typing their business name and pick themselves from a Google list. We pull their address, phone and website from Google in the background.

HIGHLEVEL

Nothing. We hold their details, but create no contact – an email is the only key worth filing them under.

CUSTOMER

They type their name, email and mobile

Now we know who they actually are – but we still don't file anything until they press the button. Half-typed forms aren't leads.

HIGHLEVEL

Still nothing until they submit – typing an address into a box isn't a lead.

CUSTOMER

They submit – and this is when HighLevel first hears about them

Now we have an email, so we file them. From here Assist and Connect behave completely differently – follow the next two pages.

HIGHLEVEL – FIRST CONTACT

A contact is created keyed on their email, and an opportunity opens:

Abandoned checkout

Named “Garage – Assist”, with no value until they pay.

“Abandoned checkout” means they gave us an email and didn't finish. That's a real lead you can chase – a name, an address, and a garage that got most of the way. Someone who only browsed never reaches HighLevel at all.

Older records may be doubled up. Until July 2026 the garage-search step filed a contact against the Google phone number before it knew an email, and the “talk to us” form filed another against the email – nothing joined them, so a garage that did both exists twice, with the money sometimes on the one without an email. New signups can't do this any more, but the old duplicates are still in there. It's why the portal makes you pick the opportunity from a list rather than matching it for you – on an older garage, don't assume the first hit is right.

Assist: they do all of it themselves

£200 + VAT a month (£240 charged), 400 minutes included then 25p a minute.

No one at ReceptionMate needs to touch this – the only reason to look is if it stalls.

CUSTOMER

AUTO

They finish the Assist form

We email them a private link to their agreement straight away, and show it on screen. The link is good for 14 days.

HIGHLEVEL

Opportunity renamed “Garage – Assist”, still in Abandoned checkout

CUSTOMER

They sign the agreement online

Name, position and a drawn signature. We record the time, their IP address and their device against it. No account exists yet – nothing has been created but a signature.

HIGHLEVEL

No move. Signing alone doesn't count – the card does.

CUSTOMER

STRIPE

They add a card – and this is the moment they become real

Nothing is charged. The card is stored and the 14-day trial starts. The instant it's accepted their account is built: business, garage, agent, login and a signed agreement on file. They're sent to choose their own password. No card means no account – the system checks with Stripe rather than taking the browser's word for it.

HIGHLEVEL – THE IMPORTANT ONE

Opportunity moves to Free trial live and is set to £200 – the first time it carries any value.

AUTO

STRIPE

Day 14 – the first real payment

Stripe charges £240 to the saved card and renews monthly. If they never added a card the trial simply expires and nothing happens.

HIGHLEVEL

Opportunity moves to Live and £££££ at £200. Only fires on a payment that actually clears.

What to watch: someone who signed but never added a card is stuck at step 7 forever – signed contract, no account, no trial, and their opportunity still sitting in Abandoned checkout. That's the one worth chasing by hand.

Connect: in the door in under a minute

£250 + VAT a month (£300 charged), 500 conversations included then 20p each. The fastest route we have – and the loosest.

Connect customers never sign anything. Assist signs an agreement before it gets an account; Connect gets an account, a free month and a live chat widget on the strength of a texted code alone. Worth knowing before you promise a Connect customer anything contractual – there's no contract to point at.

Briefly wrong in HighLevel: a Connect signup touches Live and £££££ for a split second before being corrected to Free trial live. If you ever build an automation on "Live and £££££", it will fire on every Connect trial. Don't.

Automate: the one we actually run

Sold on a demo call, priced per deal, paid by Direct Debit. This is the route with real work in it – six of these steps need a person.

CUSTOMER

They ask to talk to us

Any “talk to us” form on the site. The team gets an email and a text immediately.

HIGHLEVEL

Contact created from their email, opportunity opens in

Enquiry Received & Demo Links sent

No value on it.

YOU

Demo call

Book it, run it, agree a price. Move the opportunity through the demo stages in HighLevel yourself – the portal doesn't know about any of this yet.

HIGHLEVEL – YOU MOVE THESE

Demo Call Booked

Demo Call Completed

YOU

Onboard them in the portal – Admin → Quick Onboard

Every commercial decision is made here: the monthly price, any setup fee, how they pay (Direct Debit, card or invoice), and whether they get a free trial or free-until-X-bookings.

Tick send agreement and the account is created silently – no welcome email, no login. Deliberate: that comes later, once the agent works. Pick their opportunity from the dropdown, or nothing you do from here reaches HighLevel.

HIGHLEVEL

You link the opportunity here. Set

Contract Sent yourself – the portal deliberately leaves this one alone.

AUTO

The agreement goes out

A branded email with a private link, good for 14 days. You can send it to a different address than the portal login – the director signs, the manager uses the system – and text it too. Whoever opens the link can sign; the address it went to is printed on the signed PDF. The Agreements screen shows when they opened it, how often, and from where.

HIGHLEVEL

No automatic move. Sending is yours to record.

CUSTOMER

STRIPE

They sign – and four things happen at once

They land on a payment page for the setup fee (if the deal has one) – card button plus our bank details. It's due then and there, on signing, exactly as the agreement says. The invoice is emailed with a PDF, both sides get the signed agreement with its audit trail, and the deal moves on by itself. An unpaid fee won't block the build – but it's due now, so chase it now.

HIGHLEVEL – AUTOMATIC

Opportunity moves to

Awaiting Integration Credentials

and is set to the monthly price x number of branches – the real deal value, set once, here.

From signature to live

Everything from here runs off two buttons on the onboarding pipeline card.

Get the integration credentials

Contact Garage Hive or Tyresoft and ask for the garage's credentials. This happens on the phone and by email – the portal can't do it for you, which is why there's a button rather than magic.

When they arrive, hit Credentials received. The date is stamped on the card so you can see how long it took.

HIGHLEVEL – AUTOMATIC

Moves to

Agent Account Setup, awaiting go live date

YOU

Build the agent, then send the welcome email

Set up and test the agent. Only when it genuinely works, hit Send welcome email – that's the first the customer hears since they signed.

It sends their login with the standard starting password, which they're forced to change the first time they log in. The portal refuses to send it twice, and refuses entirely once they've logged in and set their own password – it can't lock a customer out by accident.

HIGHLEVEL – AUTOMATIC

Moves to

Invited – awaiting DD mandate

CUSTOMER

They log in and set themselves up

They choose a password, then run the setup wizard – voice, opening hours, greeting, FAQs.

HIGHLEVEL

No move. Still Invited until the mandate lands.

CUSTOMER

GOCARDLESS

They set up the Direct Debit – and they're live

30 seconds through GoCardless. Billing starts on whatever basis you chose at step 3: straight away, at the end of a free trial, or after their Nth confirmed booking.

HIGHLEVEL – AUTOMATIC

Moves to Live and £££££

Multi-branch groups: the agreement covers the whole business, so signing moves every branch at once, and one Direct Debit covers all of them on a single monthly invoice with each branch itemised. Branches that are already live are never touched.

If the mandate never arrives, they're never billed. A garage sitting in Invited has a login, a working agent and no way to pay us. That stage is the one to chase.

The numbers, and the stages

Everything on this page was read from the live system, not from a price list.

Portal drives, HighLevel reflects. Once a deal is in the portal, don't drag its opportunity around by hand – the buttons do it. If the two ever disagree about whether a garage is live, the portal is right.

Read this bit

None of these are broken exactly. They're just the places where what you'd assume and what actually happens part company.

Older garages may be in HighLevel twice

Until July 2026 signup filed a contact against the Google phone before it knew an email, while the "talk to us" form filed one against the email – and nothing joined them. Those garages are in there twice, sometimes with the money on the one without an email. New signups can't do this; the old ones are still there. When the portal asks you to pick an opportunity, read the list.

Nothing is recorded until they hand over an email

Browsing, searching for your garage, typing half a form – none of it reaches HighLevel. An opportunity exists only once someone submits an email, which is also the first moment they're worth chasing.

HighLevel failing is silent

Every update we send is fire-and-forget. If HighLevel is down or the record has gone, nothing throws, nothing retries and nobody's told – the portal carries on and the CRM quietly drifts. The portal is always the truth; HighLevel is a convenience.

A garage with no linked opportunity is invisible

Skip the dropdown at Quick Onboard and everything still works – the agreement, the invoice, going live – but not one of it appears in HighLevel. You can link it later on the pipeline card.

Signing an Assist deal isn't a sale

The card creates the account, and we check with Stripe that one really exists before building anything – signing alone gets nobody in. Someone who signed and never added a card has a contract on file, no account, and an opportunity still in Abandoned checkout. A sales chase, not a support problem.

"Invited" is where money goes to die

An Automate garage in Invited has a login and a working agent, and no way of paying us. Nothing chases them automatically. Watch that stage.

The setup fee is due on signing, but gates nothing

Agreement and invoice both say due on signing – no 14-day terms. But nothing stops an unpaid customer: the agent still gets built, they still go live. Deliberate, so a slow accounts department can't stall a build – which means nobody chases it but you.

Verified 16 July 2026. Prices were read from Stripe, stages from HighLevel, and every flow from the running code – not from a price list or anyone's memory. If you find it disagrees with reality, reality wins: tell Dan.
